Affection: Compulsive Choleric

Affection is the need to establish and maintain a satisfactory relationship with others in regard to love and affection (deep one-on-one relationships, such as spouses, girlfriends or boyfriends, parents, children, trusted friends). Affection asks two questions:

1. How much love and affection do I express to others?
2. How much love and affection do I want expressed to me?

General description of people who are Compulsive Choleric in Affection:

Shows a great deal of love and affection but requires only a small amount
Uses charm (behaves warmly and personably) to maintain control of deep, personal relationships
Places conditions on the love he/she gives and receives
Will only give and receive love and affection according to his/her terms
Refuses to believe that people really love him/her unless the love is given in the way he/she believes it "should" be given

Potential strengths which should be encouraged, used and developed:

May have great personal charm

Potential weaknesses which should be considered and dealt with:

Has a tendency to develop deep relationships with people who are weak-willed and then resents their weakness
Has a hard time relating to the deep, tender feelings of others - views "hurt feelings" and tears as sentimental trivia that are not called for - lacks emotional development
Will reject people and the love they show if they do not meet his/her terms or provide love according to his/her standards
